VENEERS VERSUS CROWNS

The most significant difference between veneers and crowns is that veneers are used for cosmetic improvement while crowns are used for structural improvement. Veneers cover the front of the tooth, while crowns cover the entire tooth. Veneers are often used to improve the look of stained teeth or to fix teeth that are chipped, worn down, or have gaps between them. Crowns are used to restore a tooth's shape, size, strength, and appearance, or to protect a weak tooth from breaking. Crowns may be used to support teeth with severe tooth decay or to hold a cracked or broken tooth together. They are also used to cover implants and can improve a tooth's appearance in shape or color.
